what is dye-sublimation

The advantages of dye-sublimation printing cannot be overstated and if you're new to this technology then here's what you should know. Compared to traditional wide-format inkjet printing this modern technology means you can create vivid, long-life and colour-fast displays and signage relatively quickly and cost effectively.

The process by which dye-sublimation is applied means you get high definition results while maintaining fabric integrity. You can achieve continuous tone and near-photographic images that become part of the material itself, resulting in a flawless and smooth surface.

Your graphics are safe because they are permanently embedded through the dye-sublimation process regardless of the fabric you choose.

Fabrics can include poly-poplin, satin, outdoor flag cloth, poly-knit, taffeta, sheer, chiffon, poly-silk, dacron, gaming suede, poly-dick, spun-poly, mesh and more recently, carpet.

There is no creasing or cracking to the graphics when folding your fabric. They are washable without risk and won't curl at the edges. Moreover, they are free from any glare as they have a smooth and non-glossy finish making them perfect for both indoor and outdoor applications or in highly lit areas.

The dye-sublimation printing method can be applied to outdoor flags, exhibition graphics and portable displays. And when applied to tension fabric exhibition systems your visual impact and ability to attract customers to your display is far superior to that of traditional printing methods.

The best part, however, is the eco-friendly nature of this process. It uses water-based dyes, which means that no Volatile Organic Compounds (VOC's) are produced like you would get from solvent-based inks and so there are no nasty vapours escaping into the atmosphere.

In addition, there is no waste making its way into our waterways as there is no water used in the printing process thus also saving water under dye-sublimation printing. And with no water in the process, prints are dry and ready to use as soon as they exit the printer in contrast to the energy-soaking heaters that traditional printing methods use to dry materials.

From a technical standpoint, the sublimation process is not complex to set up or administer thereby allowing the convenience and advantage of mass production. From a scientific standpoint, the sublimation process uses heat and pressure to convert solid particles into a gaseous state without first forming a liquid.

These gas particles are embedded within your fabric when they return to a solid. The high temperature used in the process opens the pores of your fabric through which the dye moves in and the particles bond together.

Once cooled, the pores of the fabric close, the particles settle and they don't move or wash away. This physical reaction is named sublimation and when applied to the printing process is the technology of dye-sublimation printing.

trade only

Our commitment to you is a continued 'trade only' client model, meaning that unless you are one of our accredited clients you cannot buy direct. We believe the benefit of this is strong partnership based interactions that protect and enhance our relationship with you and in turn your relationships with your clients.

We have made a long-term commitment to our clients that our industry positioning is trade only, and we continue to honour and maintain that dedicated stance. But, we do welcome new clients and urge you to consider joining our movement of preferred partners.

By registering as a preferred partner, you can be sure that you will receive the best prices, the best service and continued support across our business. Our products are industry leading, our reputation sound and our prices sharp meaning that you can benefit from good profit margins and remain competitive.

You can be sure that our quest for innovative new products, the best and most efficient machinery and better ways for working is endless. We have a culture of continual evolution and you can be confident that you and your clients will be exposed to all that it produces.

AS THE PRINCIPAL AND MOST PROFICIENT FABRIC PRINTER IN NEW ZEALAND OUR COMMITMENT TO THE TRADE IS UNPARALLELED AND THUS ONLY SELL THROUGH OUR AUTHORISED RESELLER NETWORK.

SERVICING TRADE
ONLY

We are happy to supply marketing collateral, imagery and display product for your use should you like to include these in product portfolios, presentations or in your "products" section of your website. We welcome opportunities for cobranding and are happy to offer our expertise and advice for pitches and sales documentation. Work with us to better understand your client base and their needs so we can recommend products that will appeal and add value.

We are often contacted directly by consumers wanting to purchase direct. Our preferred partners benefit from these queries as once these are identified as "non-trade", we pair them up with a partner who is geographically and specialization aligned and can facilitate the sale and delivery of our product.

To become an accredited client, just get in touch and we can set you up in an hour.

what we do it all started with, and it still revolves around, printing fabric. Now, we run a vertically integrated printing business and as such we do our printing, pressing, cutting and sewing inhouse. Whatever you want done with fabric, we can do it and all in New Zealand.

We have a relentless focus on innovation, ensuring that we continue to lead the industry in best practice, world class design, the latest machinery and personalised customer service.
